

The flourmill was built in 1905 and was in full running order until 1999. At present the machinery which was used in complementary operations to grind the grain is on view to the public. The building however, is now a commercial centre. When the flour mill was built the operating system used was the Austrian-Hungarian type, with energy produced by gas oil, a fuel consisting of petrol and alcohol, later steam was used and finally in 1957, the electric motor.
